

I have completed a lot of assignments in my three years at Carleton, I have enjoyed most of them but my favourite is one of my most recent essays, a psychological breakdown and therapy treatment plan for a character in the movie 'The Miseducation of Cameron Post'. The movie is about a gay conversion camp in the 90s and I focused on one of the main characters' friends Jane. I found this assignment more challenging and fulfilling to write. I spent several days on it, using all my free time between shifts. I felt very passionate about conversion camps and the trauma they inflict on youth, I also did a good amount of research on polyamory and communes for that assignment and found all of it very interesting.